Mobile high-speed broadband: 90% of the population in Lesser Populated Zones now covered 3 years ahead of obligatory requirement. 466 new towns now have 4G coverage, and 332 new towns now have 4G+ coverage.

In October 2018, SFR continued to expand its 4G/4G+ network and remains - according to the French National Frequencies Agency (ANFR)³ - the provider with the most working 4G antennas in France (35,018 antennas at the end of October). As of November 1st, 98% of the population has 4G coverage.

Furthermore, SFR has achieved, 3 years ahead of schedule, its target of covering 90% of the population in Lesser Populated Zones, taken from the obligatory requirement on January 17, 2022.

In October, SFR provided 4G coverage to 466 additional towns, 447 of which have fewer than 3,500 inhabitants, and 4G+ to 332 towns.

For example, Divonne-les-Bains (01), Eyguières (13) or Montargis (45) will now enjoy 4G coverage, while Sisteron (04), Trégunc (29) or Sauternes (33) will benefit from 4G+ (see lists below).

12 new towns now covered by 4G+ of up to 300 Mbps

SFR continues to invest in order to provide its customers with 4G+ of up to 300 Mbps, offering them a theoretical maximum speed three times greater than that offered by 4G. Already launched in more than 1,054 towns, this technology is now available in Voiron (38), Mons (69) and Vertou (44) (see lists below).

SFR launches 4G+ of up to 500 Mbps in Nice and Montpellier

SFR was the first provider to launch 4G in France, and since 2017 it has introduced 4G+ of up to 300 Mbps into the country's 30 largest cities and has now reached an ambitious new milestone.

¹, Lesser Populated Zones according to ARCEP: 22,500 towns making up 18% of the population and 63% of the country

² Fiber with optical or coaxial terminal, according to eligibility

³ According to the barometer produced by the National Frequencies Agency: <https://www.anfr.fr/gestion-des-frequences-sites/observatoire/>

After Bordeaux, Lyon, Saint-Etienne, Marseille and Toulon, 4G+ of up to 500 Mbps is now available in the cities of Nice and Montpellier. In total, more than 10 major cities are on schedule to receive it by the end of 2018.

SFR customers with a 4G plan and a compatible device will therefore enjoy, at no extra cost, significantly faster speeds, with no limits to their online mobile usage.

4G+ of up to 500 Mbps is the next level up from standard 4G. Through aggregating four 4G frequency bands, 4G+ of up to 500 Mbps is able to provide a theoretical maximum speed of 593 Mbps, offering customers unparalleled ease and browsing speed while on the move.

5G at the Altice Campus in Paris

By increasing 4G speeds in this way, SFR continues to provide its customers with the best possible service: while waiting for 5G to arrive in 2020, from 2019 SFR will be offering 4G speeds of up to 1Gbit/s.

Totally focused on the future, SFR is on the road to 5G, the next generation of mobile, with a view to equipping the first cities in 2019 and having the commercial launch in 2020. SFR broke new ground last month by using 5G in real terms, for the first time, at the inauguration of the Altice Campus, the headquarters of the most innovative telecoms and media group in Europe.

Fixed high-speed broadband: France's first fiber optic' infrastructure provider with 12 million eligible FTTx connections, in October SFR added 154,000 new fiber connections across 154 towns.

Specifically, in October, 154,000 homes and business premises were made connectable to fiber in 154 towns. Of these, 92 were new to the world of fiber, such as Château-Thierry (02), Bouc-Bel-Air (13), Lacroix-Saint-Ouen (60), Le Meux (60) and La Ferté-Gaucher (77) while 62 saw their coverage extended, such as Auneau-Bleury-Saint-Symphorien (28), Gien (45) et Sotteville-lès-Rouen (76), Goussainville (95) (see lists below).

Today, SFR's fiber services are available in more than 2,300 French towns.

As owner of France's first fiber infrastructure network (FTTH/FTTB), with 12 million available connections, SFR affirms its leadership and will continue to drive the market with its sustained program of deployment to bring fiber optic broadband into the heart of the country.

4G+ and 4G+ of up to 300 Mbps are offered at no extra cost to SFR customers with 4G subscriptions and compatible devices. For information about eligibility for FTTx, mobile coverage and details of the services offered, please visit sfr.fr.
